

SAYS WIFE LIVED WITH HER PASTOR AS HIS "SISTER"

Testimony From Winnipeg in
E. Bartol Hall, Jr.'s, Suit for Divorce.

PAIR ELOPED LAST MAY.

Young Husband Said to Have Traced Rev. B. Q. Denham and Companion.

The referee appointed to hear witnesses in the suit for divorce brought by E. Bartol Hall, Jr., against his wife, Emma Kirk Hall, is Herbert B. Brush, a lawyer, of No. 189 Montague street, Brooklyn. The appointment was made by Justice Joseph Aspinwall. The hearing before the referee will begin within a week, and Mrs. Hall will be a witness in her own behalf. She is stopping with friends near this city.

Rev. Benjamin Q. Denham, former pastor of the First Church of the Disciples of Christ, on West Fifty-sixth street, Manhattan, who is named as correspondent in the divorce suit, is expected to return East, although he may have counsel to represent him at the hearing.

The evidence secured against his wife and the clergyman upon which Mr. Hall bases his suit is contained in two affidavits, made by John Simpson and his wife, living in Winnipeg, with whom the couple are alleged to have spent two weeks after their disappearance together last May.

The affidavits state that between May 21 and June 7 Mrs. Hall and the Rev. Mr. Denham lived at the Simpson home. They engaged two rooms on the day they arrived. The clergyman described them as L. Z. Deering and sister. After spending one night, Mr. Denham had the "sisters" moved into his room on the excuse that she suffered from heart trouble and could not sleep in a strange room.

The two beds remained in the room until June 7, when, according to the affidavits, Mr. Denham showed the Simpsons a telegram stating that their mother had suddenly been stricken with heart disease and that his "sister" was obliged to return to New York at once. The "sister" went away and Mr. Denham followed a day later.

The Simpsons positively identified photographs of Mrs. Hall and Mr. Denham as likenesses of "Mr. Deering and sister." Charles M. Weeks, of No. 215 Montague street, Brooklyn, counsel for Mr. Hall, to-day declined to say when the first hearing before the referee would be called.

"My client does not desire any more publicity, and we shall conduct this matter with all the secrecy possible. We have sufficient evidence, I feel assured, although the outcome depends on how the referee regards the testimony offered before him."

Charles M. Weeks, of No. 215 Montague street, Brooklyn, counsel for Mr. Hall, to-day declined to say when the first hearing before the referee would be called.

The couple were married twelve years ago. The families of both man and wife were prominent in the South, the Kirks in North Carolina and the Halls in Virginia.

The summer home of the Halls, in Glen Cove, is now for sale. It is a charming place overlooking the Sound, and adjoining that of J. Ross Maxwell and Henry Heste.

TWO WIVES SEEK FRAIL IN HOSPITAL

Superintendent Can't Decide
Rival Claims to Injured Man, So Bars Both.

When Charles N. Frail, a marble dealer whose home is at No. 223 West One Hundred and Twenty-seventh street, leaves J. Hood Wright Hospital, where his right leg was amputated a few days ago, he will have a difficult matrimonial problem to solve. At present two women call at the hospital to see him, and each claims she is his lawful wife. In view of this curious situation, neither is admitted.

On Sept. 7, when Frail was taken to the hospital after having his leg crushed by a block of material, a good-looking woman of about thirty-five called and said that she was Mrs. Frail. She saw him every day until last Thursday, when a second woman about ten years older, called. She also said she was Mrs. Frail, and produced a marriage certificate. Townley said he could not settle the matter, and placed the embargo on both women.

The second Mrs. Frail told a reporter at her home, No. 375 Prospect avenue, that she had been separated from her husband for two years, but wanted to take him to her home when he left the hospital. She refused to discuss the other woman.

STABBED WITH ICE PICK IN A SALOON ROW.

Sylvester Scott, a painter, of No. 119 Second avenue, is dying in the Presbyterian Hospital with a stab wound over his heart, alleged to have been inflicted by Fred Engle, bartender in a saloon at No. 20 East Sixty-first street. The latter is a prisoner in the East sixty-seventh street station.

SEARCHED TWO YEARS TILL HE FOUND IT

A Broadway Florist's Perseverance Well Rewarded at Last.

Several prominent New York business men were gathered together during the recent carnival at Arverne. A discussion arose as to what percentage of element of luck featured in each individual life.

One of the party, Mr. A. Warden, a prominent Broadway florist, maintained that perseverance and not luck was in the main responsible for the successes of private and social as well as commercial life, and to illustrate his point cited the following:

"As most of my friends know, I was operated upon several years ago for appendicitis. The doctors said the operation was a success, and I must take their word for it, but I've never been a well man since. Although a florist, my path has not been strewn with roses by any means. I had gastritis and catarrh of the stomach and so many other ailments and complications that their recitation would read like the index of a medical book. I tried every remedy that was known to medicine or to my friends, every treatment that was ever devised to part you from your money, and all without result. I did not recover my old health and strength, and I still went around with drooping head and sagging frame and an absolute indifference to my business and social duties. In fact, I didn't much care whether school kept or not. Now here's the part that I claim proves my point. Despite the fact that I was not met with relief, I was not without hope. I heard that Prof. Charles Munter, who was sojourning here at the time, had effected marvellous cures with his wonderful 'Nulle', and was urged by a friend to see him. I was so tired of marvellous cures and wonderful treatments, I had had many put up to me in the past that were marvellous and wonderful only in theory. I didn't enthuse at my friend's suggestion, but in keeping with my determination to let nothing get by promised to meet Prof. Munter, which I did shortly after. I was agreeably surprised to find the Professor a smooth-shaven young man of the modern school—a man of vast intellect and magnetism and a wonderful sense of sympathy. The run of doctors and professors of perfect cure were usually elderly gentlemen and generally endowed with a hirsute appendage of luxuriant growth. After listening to my tale of woe the Professor said: 'I can readily cure you, and I made an appointment to meet him at his office the following day. I had been told the same thing before by others equally as prepossessing as the Professor and I wasn't very hopeful. Still I called the next day as per appointment at Prof. Munter's Nulle Institute, at 1215 West Thirty-fourth street, which is directly opposite the Waldorf, and when I saw the device that was to effect my cure I felt less hopeful of results than at any stage of my illness. You must remember that Nulle is a body brace made of a light, washable fabric that weighs but a few ounces. You put it on like a vest. It has a set of laces down the back which is drawn together by a belt that fastens at the waist in front, causing your shoulders to set back and throwing your body, as it were, in the air—at least that is the sensation I first received. I couldn't conceive at first how this little garment was going to benefit my ailment, but I do now. It did five minutes after I put it on. It's easy. It makes you breathe. Not the way you ordinarily breathe, but breathe as nature intended you should—deeply, fully and regularly."

"Gentlemen, it was less than a month ago that I put that marvellous brace on, and it is truly well named Nulle. It has infused new life into me. It has created new hopes, new aims, new ambitions, and in fact, it has practically rebuilt me, inside and out. It is unnecessary for me to dilate on my wonderful improvement. You have all commented on it, but it is a due to luck—just to perseverance, keeping everlastingly at it till I found what I needed."
